

CONGRESS' QUARREL.

Two Classes of People Are Glad it Occurred.

Those Having Private Bills and the Stalwarts.

WHILE IT WAITED.

During Senate's Inaction the House Passed Little Bills.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—[Special.]—No sooner had the senate got rid of its ill humor by talking it off and come to the sensible resolution for a full and free conference with the house than the absent Democrats, who had been hastily called in, began to string out for home again. They consist chiefly of such western and southern Democrats as have not yet been renominated and are not quite sure of it. "We can do more good in our districts than here," they all said. "We can gain more votes by staying here and seeing it through than by going home," said those already renominated. And both are right from their respective standpoints. It's an ill wind that blows good to nobody, and two classes of people have great cause to be thankful for the quarrel between the houses and the lengthening of the session—namely, persons who had private bills pending and stalwarts who were in doubt about their renomination. It is admitted that several members have been greatly helped at home by the recent turn of affairs. "How did you come to nominate B. when the delegates seemed to be against him awhile back?" was asked of a western renegade who had just arrived. "Simplest thing in the world," he replied. "Had we nominated any one else we should have had to inform all this congress and the insinuation and run on that record, but B. can run on his own record, and so we don't have to mention anything else."

Why They Hurred Away. The southern absentees have good reason to hurry away, for there are equally times all the way down the coast. Mr. Wise of the Richmond district, who had been taking things easily in the belief that his calling and election were sure, was suddenly called home the other day to find that a vigorous and dangerous opposition had sprung up almost as suddenly as Jonah's gourd. Mr. Marshall of the extreme southwestern Virginia district ("Cyclone Jim") has had something of a tussle from the start, and it reached the acute stage just when the tariff trouble was at the worst. Mr. Bunn of the Raleigh district will have to retire at the end of six years' service, for the primaries have gone against him, and he has announced his withdrawal. Mr. Alexander of the Charlotte (N. C.) district is also likely to go out. Further south and west renominations are the rule, and if the Republicans and Populists do not upset present calculations nearly all the present representatives from the south will return to us. Mr. Mallory of Florida and Mr. Abbott of Texas are still in some danger.

The other class who have found this ill wind of tariff quarreling greatly to their advantage have been the men with claims and the applicants for special aid under the pension laws. The house, having nothing to do but wait on the senate, amused itself by passing 20 or 30 little bills per day and incidentally overhauling once more the much bedeviled question of how far the military record of a soldier ought to be interfered with. House bill 533, to correct the inaccuracies arising under the act of July 27, 1890, is a matter of general concern, and the discussion upon its passage brought out a great number of very curious cases. General Grosvenor said of the bill he had introduced:

"It was a case where a soldier had overstepped his limit of the extreme fitness of his wife. He stated some months beyond the limitation of his furlough and was marked as a deserter. As soon as it was possible for him to return he started back to his command. On the way down to the Ohio river, at a point where the stage stopped for dinner, he went under a stream to wash and was drowned. Under the existing laws his wife cannot have a pension, although the soldier was on his way back to his regiment."

Pensions for Children. To this it was replied that hard cases make bad law, and that a sweeping act like that proposed would open the door to fraud. Nevertheless, with an amendment that it should not apply in cases where actual desertion was proved, the bill was passed. Another bill making things easier for claimants is that which allows fourth class postmasters to administer the oath to pensioners and their witnesses and make certificates thereof to the pension office. Several other bills were reported from the committee on invalid pensions, and most of them passed with little friction till it came to the bill for continuing the pension of the children of deceased soldiers when such children are imbeciles. It was shown in the course of the debate that very many private bills had been passed to pension such children, and it was claimed that the thing might as well be done by a general act. This, however, was an obvious case of pensioning children for life in order to relieve counties of their poor charges to that extent, and it brought out some extremely flaming remarks from Mr. Hutchison of Texas. This in turn aroused Mr. Blair of New Hampshire from the lethargy which seems to have possessed him since he left the senate for the house, and the two gentlemen, extremes in everything, amused their colleagues at great length. The bill passed.

Sharp Practice. Taking it all in all, applicants for pensions have fared remarkably well during these days of rushing things. Another bill of great importance was slipped through the house by shrewd management—some people would call it a trick—while nearly all the Republicans had gone over to hear the message in the senate. It is a measure which has been before congress in one shape or another for 40 years, but only reached the stage for party recrimination a few years after the war. It appears that about the time Arkansas came into the Union and when there was a surplus in the United States treasury that state borrowed $528,000 of the Smithsonian trust fund and issued therefor $1,000 bonds redeemable in October, 1891, and January, 1898. When the first lot fell due, the collection business was bad in Arkansas, and when the second fell due the so-called carpetbag government was in power, and money was source there. The general government had withheld other funds due the state under general laws to an amount which Arkansas officials claimed offset the amount due. The state had also thrown all its finances into hotchpot, and, to use a mild term, "converted" all its older indebtedness. After a deal of figuring the interior department now concludes that the land indemnities due the state under various acts might offset the claim of the government.

LOOKS LIKE AN OUTRAGE.

The Irrepressible Deputy Marshal Sticks His Foot in It Again.

C. D. Moore and C. A. Moore, brothers, were this afternoon released from the county jail on their own recognizance by order of Judge Foster.

The men were arrested in Ottawa last Monday night and put in the Shawnee county jail at noon on Tuesday, accused of violating Judge Foster's injunction against strikers interfering with the operation of the Santa Fe railroad. If their story is true their arrest was an outrage.

Their mother, they say, was leaning out of a window of her house talking in a joking manner with a railroad man who said he was making only eighty-five cents a day. She remarked that that was poor pay for "scabbing." Ed Stilson, a machinist's apprentice, who was passing by, heard the remark, and turning to Mrs. Moore, swore at her and used the grossest insulting language. The sons then took a hand and a fight with Stilson was the result. Stilson was arrested and fined in police court for assault on the men and insulting Mrs. Moore.

Upon leaving the court room, Deputy United States Marshal E. L. Walker arrested both of the young men without a warrant and brought them to Topeka, where they claim they were put in jail without even commitment papers. When Judge Foster heard their story he ordered their release.

One of the men arrested has never been employed on a railroad and the other has not been for some time, and still it is supposed they were arrested for violating Judge Foster's injunction.

EXCUSES THAT WERE MADE

By Arkansas City Railroad Men to Avoid Going to Work.

The receivers' side of the Arkansas City reinstatement cases is being heard today before Judge J. B. Johnson, special master in chancery in the Santa Fe case. Superintendent F. J. Hartman and W. Littlefield of the Santa Fe law department were present, and the receivers and conductor T. M. Hansen the men out of employment. Trainmaster G. F. Hawks of Arkansas City was examined this morning. Each case was taken up and discussed separately. All were brokenmen.

The first case was that of A. J. Thorne, who refused to go to work on his July 2, because of a muskied finger. The trainmaster saw him on the afternoon of the fourth playing base ball.

D. J. Henry said he was sick and had a doctor's certificate to show for it.

C. W. Jones had a lame back, and refused to go on the local. Said he would go on any other train.

Philip E. Brennan refused to go out on the local freight because he said he had sickness in the family. He also said he belonged to the A. R. C.

James M. Hamlin was off because of sickness in his family, but in a pinch had been asked to take a six-hour run, which he refused to do, although it was not shown that any of his family were dangerously ill.

Wm. Thorpe refused to take the pile driver out, saying that he was off for the fourth. He did not report till the 7th, when he was discharged.

W. R. Dillon was also called to go out with the pile-driver, but refused to sign the call book.

H. W. Dickinson seems to have been in hiding when the call came for him and could not be found. When on the stand he refused to tell where he had been.

N. H. George refused to go out on the pile-driver because he did not want to be called a scab.

W. F. Yount refused to go out with the pile-driver for the same reason.

W. A. Hanna did not want to be called a scab either and refused to go on the special run. He would go on his own car, he said.

L. C. Huck was in the same fix. He would go on his own car, but would not take the place of a striker.

The mere refusal of the trainmaster holds, to take any position when called, whether the position has been vacated by another or not, is sufficient cause for discharge.

The failure to be in a place that the call book requires was also enough to get a man his discharge.

It was Judge Johnson's opinion that no railroad or person would want in its employ a man that would refuse to do his duty as prescribed by the employer.

The arguments were closed this afternoon, and Judge Johnson will leave tomorrow for the east, where he will meet the case.

Robbed the Church. The Catholic Church of the Assumption at the corner of Eighth and Jackson streets was burglarized last night. The robbers pried open a lock to the door of the dressing room at the rear part of the church.

The only article stolen that has been missed at this time was a heavy silver vase lined with gold. Several smaller vases were not molested.

Tarsney and His Prisoner. NEVADA, Mo., Aug. 2.—Adjutant General T. J. Tarsney, of Colorado, arrived here this morning from Kansas City for the purpose of securing requisition papers from Governor Sione to take Joseph Wilson back to Colorado to answer the charge of assisting in tarring and feathering him on the night of June 23. He secured the papers.

For instance, Mrs. Chas. Rogers, of Bay City, Mich., accidentally spilled scalding water over her little boy. She promptly applied De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve, giving instant relief. It's a wonderfully good salve for burns, bruises, sores, and a sure cure for Piles. J. K. Jones.

A satisfied customer is a permanent one. That's why we recommend De Witt's Early Risers. They cure constipation, indigestion and biliousness. J. K. Jones.

Prescott & Co. will remove to No. 119 West Eighth this month.

Good work done by the Peerless.

NEWS OF KANSAS.

A GRASSHOPPER STORM.

Millions of Grasshoppers Blown Into Wichita in Advance of a Storm.

WICHITA, Aug. 2.—Preceding the storm last night came a cloud of big, fat grasshoppers. They did not come in ones and twos, but in clouds and swarms. Pedestrians crunched them under foot by the hundreds, and the light of the electric lamps was obscured in parts of the city by the swarms that flittered about the globes.

Hundreds of live grasshoppers were dying and jumping about on the streets and settling down on the store boxes and windows, while many more lay dead on the sidewalks and out in the streets.

BUDD DOBLE TO RUN.

He Announces His Intention To Be a Candidate for Congress.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—A telegram from Grand Forks, N. D., announces that Budd Doble, who knows all about driving a trotting horse to victory has entered himself to run in a race over a track on which the mud is sometimes very thick, very dirty, and very much given to flying in showers.

Mr. Doble proposes to run a race on the uncertain course of politics, in which there is no cash prize at stake. Budd Doble wishes to become Hon. Budd Doble by being a member of congress. He is in the telegram says, to make the race for congress.

Doble is about 50 years old now, and there is not a race track of any note in the country over which he has not driven to victory. On none of them has any mud splashed his reputation. If he were need of a campaign fund, though, probably he is not the man to raise it. Owners of horses who might very well chip in to make up a congressional stake for Hon. Doble.

PULLMAN WORKS OPEN.

About 250 Men Go to Work—There Is No Disturbance.

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—The Pullman works were started today quietly and without demonstration on the part of the ex-employees. But 250 men reported for work, although the company expected 800. About one thousand strikers gathered about the building and good naturedly chaffed the returning workmen, but no attempt at violence was made. A heavy detail of police was on hand and remained at the works all day on guard.

THE A. R. U. CONVENTION.

Debs and 250 Other Delegates are Present.

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—President Debs presided over the American Railway Union convention which met here today. The neighborhood of the hall was thronged with men, mostly workmen, who were deeply interested in the meeting, but many of them were not delegates to the convention. The meeting began behind closed doors, and President Debs said before going in that the session would probably continue in secret, although some were in favor of admitting the public.

Vice President Howard entered the convention hall just before the meeting came to order. He said it was impossible to tell what matter might come before the delegates. The strike and boycott would, he said, of course, be the main subjects considered.

There were about 250 delegates present, representing 512 unions.
